

Telling Stories: Investigating Community History

Join Flow of History and Vermont authors Natalie Kinsey-Warnock and Jane Beck for four days of historical investigations that culminate in a Moth Storytelling event. The institute will follow a C3 Inquiry Framework with workshops on developing historical questions, making thinking visible, investigating primary sources, and sharing new understandings through story. With support from the Windham Foundation.

2016 SUMMER INSTITUTE

Grafton, VT

June 28—July 1

How does an individual's experience help us understand larger histories? Natalie Kinsey-Warnock will join us for all four days as we explore this question through hands-on activities, historical research, and storytelling.

Image from the cover of Natalie Kinsey-Warnock, From Dawn till Dusk

Tuesday, June 28: The Power of Story

- The power of history, the power of story with Natalie Kinsey-Warnock
- Investigating community history in the cemetery and census

Wednesday, June 29: Putting People in Place

- Reading the architectural landscape
- Developing strong inquiry questions
- Field study with Vermont Folklorist, Jane Beck

Thursday, June 30: Creating the Plot—What did my character do?

- Reading historical photographs with kids
- Developing context at the town office and historical society
- Making student thinking visible through mind mapping

Friday, July 1: Moth Storytelling and other ways to tell stories with kids

To register go to: <http://flowofhistory.org>

The registration portal is on the green menu bar.

Questions or scholarship inquiry: flowofhistory@gmail.com

Meals and Lodging: Grafton Inn—coffee, snacks, lunches, and two dinners are provided in your registration fee.

Registrations, Scholarships and Graduate Credit: $600 registration fee (limited $150 scholarships available). $345 for 3 graduate credits from Castleton University (includes additional work and an August meeting).